Jelecocos Helps Foundation in Fight to End Lung Cancer With New Website

Website aims to increase awareness and aid in the mission of the John Atkinson Lung Cancer Foundation

Omaha, NE – March 2, 2011 -Jelecocos is excited to reveal their contribution to the John Atkinson Lung Cancer Foundation, an organization dedicated to increasing awareness and finding a cure for lung cancer. Jelecocos has released www.Johnatkinsonfoundation.org; a website created to aid and support the goals of the foundation.

John Atkinson, a husband and father of three, died of lung cancer at the age of 40 in 2009. Striving to be recognized as a leading advocate on the issue in Nebraska and across the country, John and his family began pursuing the vision of this foundation during the last year of his battle against lung cancer.

Jelecocos donated their time and talents to the John Atkinson Lung Cancer Foundation, by creating a website that offers information and opportunities for others to become involved with the organization. With a personal connection to the Jelecocos family, start to finish, the site was up in less than three weeks.

Graphic designer Mark Mori says, "It was a privilege to be able to design a website for this amazing foundation. Even though I never knew John in life, I feel I got to know him through the design process and talking with John's friends and family. I hope that others are also able to get to know John and the wonderful work of his foundation for years to come."

Since the website's launch, Kevin Atkinson Executive Director of the foundation, has been ecstatic. He states, "The level of passion and skill Jelecocos brings to the table blows me away."

The John Atkinson Foundation is hosting their first scholarship dinner on April 16th at the German American Society in Omaha. John Knicely will be emceeding while Jason Peter and Dr. Langdon will be speaking at the event.
